Short biography

I am an Associate Professor at Stockholm University's Department of Sociology and a Visiting Fellow in the Department of Methodology at the London School of Economics. Previously, I have worked as a senior researcher at the Office for National Statistics. My research covers a range of topics relating to demography, sociology, migration studies, geography, epidemiology, political science and research methods. I have received large-scale funding for several projects that aim to understand the lives of immigrants, refugees, and their descendants. My recent research includes studies of family formation, health inequalities, and the impact of childhood on early-adult life course trajectories. My teaching reflects my research interests, in particular topics relating to demography, migration, and methodology.

Academic and research positions

2021 - ongoing	Associate Professor (Docent), Department of Sociology, Stockholm University
2024 - ongoing	Visiting Senior Fellow, Dept. of Methodology, London School of Economics
2016 - 2024	Visiting Fellow, Department of Methodology, London School of Economics
2018 - 2021	Researcher, Stockholm University Demography Unit
2016 - 2018	Postdoctoral researcher, Stockholm University Demography Unit
2014 - 2016	Fellow, Department of Methodology, London School of Economics
2012 - 2013	Researcher, Department of Social Policy, London School of Economics
2007 - 2010	Senior researcher, Office for National Statistics
2006	Researcher, Food Ethics Council
2005	Analyst, BG Group
2001 - 2003	Researcher, University of Brighton
2000 - 2001	Analyst, South East Water

Education

2021	Docent (Associate Professor) in Sociology, Stockholm University
2011 - 2015	PhD (Demography), London School of Economics (LSE) Thesis title: Origin, destination and convergence: Understanding the fertility of international migrants and their descendants Supervisors: Wendy Sigle and Jouni Kuha
2012 - 2014	Postgraduate Certificate of Higher Education (full certificate), LSE
2010 - 2011	MSc Social Research Methods (distinction), LSE
2001 - 2003	MSc Statistical Consultancy, University of Brighton
2000 - 2002	BSc Psychology, Open University
1996 - 1999	BEng Civil Engineering, University of Leeds

Teaching experience

I have more than 800 hours of experience in teaching for higher education, including courses for undergraduates, postgraduates, faculty, and professional researchers. I have a degree in teaching and have designed several courses, most recently a summer school in survey research methods.

A summary of my teaching experience is as follows:

2016-ongoing Lecturer and course leader/organiser, London School of Economics
How to analyse data from population registers and other administrative sources
Survey research methods: from design to analysis (summer school)
Event history methods for the social sciences

2017-ongoing Lecturer, Stockholm University
Migration, ethnicity and integration
Complex Inequalities

2021 Lecturer, European Association for Population Studies (EAPS) PhD Masterclass
Understanding the causes of intergenerational adaptation:
Explaining inequalities for the children of refugees and other immigrants

2019 Lecturer and course organiser, Tallinn University
Methods Masterclass: Causal inference in the social sciences

2014-2016 Fellow, Department of Methodology, London School of Economics
Fundamentals of social science research design
Survey methodology
Causal inference for experimental and observational studies
Statistical analysis of survey data and the use of survey weights
Event history analysis
Introduction to quantitative analysis
Applied regression analysis
Dissertation supervision

2011-2014 Graduate Teaching Assistant, London School of Economics
Causal inference for experimental and observational studies
Assessing social progress
Applied regression analysis
Introduction to linear regression
Introduction to quantitative analysis
Survey methods (LSE methods summer school)
